Near the office where the former first secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist Party now works, there is a building with a red banner slung across its facade. Emblazoned with six-foot high white lettering, it reads: Hail to the Soviet armed forces -our liberators.

The banner refers to the Red Army's liberation of Czechslovakia from Nazi occupation during World War II. But it could equally well be a paean of praise for its return as an invading force in August 1968.

In the topsy-turvy society that Czechslovakia has become, the reform movement known abroad as the Prague Spring is officially condemned as a "counter-revolution" and its forcible suppression is lauded as "an act of socialist · Jiri Hajek was Czechslovakian the most perfectly preserved medieval quariers and bridges in Europe. It is sad because it was once one of the great cities and its growth and vitality have somehow been stunted by the im position of an alien system.

The Czechs possess the virtues of sobriety and hard work. They are proud of founding the first university in Central Europe and of their resistance to the Papacy in the 15th century - 100 years before similar developments elsewhere. Prague's citizens have long dreamed of being a kind of bridge between East and West.

For a hrief period before the Communist coup in 1948 and again 20 years later, it was a vision that looked like it would be realized. Today, however, the official mentality is that of the bor-der state: the Soviet bloc's military and ideological representative on the front line with the capitalist West.

Since the Czechs are essentially Western in outlook, the fear of ideological contamination is that much greater.

In Čzechoslovakia no attempt has yet been made to embark on a policy of national reconciliation like that adopted by Janos Kadar in neighboring Hungary after the bloody suppression of the 1956 uprising. Nor is there the mood of outspoken national defiance that makes the Russians tread so wantly in Poland.

Ever the realists, the Czechs appear resigned to accepting a situation they can do little to

Of the package of reforms in-troduced in 1968, the puly one to survive virtually intact is federalization. After years of feeling exploited by the Czechs, the Slovaks now have their own regional covernment.

One old Czech Communist. originally expelled from the party for opposing the Hitler-Stalin pact, sees the main consequence of the events of 1968 as mass apathy. Before and during the Prague Spring, people thought it was worthwhile taking part in politics. Now hardly anybody does. Politics is thought of as an evil and dirty business for evil and dirty men.

Dubcek Forgotten

It is a sentiment echoed by a young office-worker who demonstrated against the Soviet invasion as a student, but now wants nothing to do with politics. "I think my generation is more interested in family life than political life. Most Czechs I know have largely forgotten about the Dubcek era and never discuss it. Our main concerns are to own a car and a country cottage — and to get away for the weekend."

For a generation brought up on the trauma of Munich in 1938 when the Western allies agreed to the dismembering of Czechoslovakia in order to appease Hitler and then the 1948 Soviet-backed Communist coup, the crushing of the Prague Spring was a tremen-dous psychological blow.

Fairly Prosperous

An intellectual says, "During, the normalization period most people felt compelled to put up their hands in favor of the invasion at political meetings in factories and offices. So many party members had been dismissed from their jobs that it seemed pointless to resist. But it left a permanent scar on the soul." This man signed the charter himself, but he is not hopeful of anything changing in the near future.

Some workers express satisfaetion with a lifestyle which, while not exactly affluent, is certainly more prosperous than that of any Soviet bloc country other than East Germany. Standards of living in Czechoslovakia are well below neighboring Austria — but there are no great dispanties of wealth, and the pace of work to factories is much slower than it is in a capitalist society.

explode. The terrorists escaped.

With hindsight, there is general agreement that the events of 1968 had a negative impact on the long-run development of Czech society. Not only have most Czechs become disillusioned with politics, but the rapidity with which eveous got out of con-trol during the Prague Spring has made the present leadership and their Soviet masters that much more suspicious of any future move toward liberalization.

Outright opposition to the new regime — as opposed to silent opposition — is confined to a small band of intellectuals and former politicians like Mr. Hajek who helieve that the reform movement had a deep and lasting effect on the Czech people.

'Moment of Truth'

"1968 was our moment of truth," Mr. Hajek said. "the time when we virtually unanimously resisted the invasion and forced the Soviet Union to release Mr. Dubcek and the other liberal leaders who were forcibly taken to Moscow. That is an experience which cannot be eradicated from

Huge Welcome Planned

Panama Eager for Carter Despite Treaty Protests

By Alan Riding

PANAMA CITY, Jupe 14 (NYT) The Panamanian government has swallowed its objections to U.S. Senate changes in the new canal treaties and is planning a huge wel-come for President Carter Friday. when he arrives to exchange documents ratifying the pacts with Panama's chief of government. Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos.

Tens of thousands of govern-ment employees, schoolchildren and peasants are to be brought in from the provinces. Meanwhile, radio, television and newspaper advertisements are telling people here that it is their patriotic duty to receive Mr. Carter.

"We owe Carter a lot," Romulo Escohar, Panama's chief treaty negotiator, said. "He gambled heavily on the treaties even though he had little to gain politically."

Yet, while the president now scents assured of a noisy and friendly official reception, many Panamanian leftists and nationalists remain strongly opposed to the treaties and consider that Mr. Carter's visit is, in the words of one group. "the climax to an injustice." Some leftist student organizations are planning demonstrations against the visit this week and have

The government appareotly is hoping that a bigger turnout for the U.S. president will suggest that Gen. Torrijos is more popular than his principal political challenger.

Wisdom Questioned

Noting the domestic political implications of the visit, some foreign diplomats have begun questioning Mr. Carter's wisdom in coming lor the exchange of instruments of ratification, particularly since the treaties cannot take effect until Oct. 1, 1979, unless Congress approves implementing legislation beore next March.

"How many times can you celehrate this political victory?" a for-eign diplomat asked, recalling the signing ceremony last Septenther in Washington attended by most Latin American presidents, "Wouldn't it have been better to have had a simple symbolic exchange of instruments instead of Mr. Carter coming down with a cast of thousands?"

Mr. Carter reportedly will be accompanied by about 300 personal guests, while Panama has invited he presidents of Mexico. Venezue la. Colombia and Costa Rica and the premier of Jamaica.

Opposition groups of both left and right —all but the Liberal Party, which was in power between 1964 and 1968 — have come out strongly against the trip and are interpreting the visit as Washington's way of holstering the Torrijos regime and insuring the survival of the treaties. The Signals Intelligence Act makes it a crime to publish classified information obtained through electronic cavesdropping or to dis-close the procedures used to intercept such information. Conviction is punishable by up to 10 years imprisonment a fine of up to $10,000 or both.

No charges were brought against the reporters. Mr. Nessen wrote, because Attorney General Edward Levi concluded that a criminal trial would have required the revelation of too many secrets.

James Goodale, executive vice president of The New York Times Co., recalled being warned by Mitchell Rogovin, special counsel to the director of the CIA, of the danger of prosecution under the Signals Intelligence Act. Mr. Nessen wrote that President Ford was not told about the deliberations over the prosecution of the reporters. By Bernard Gwertzman

WASHINGTON, June 14 (NYT) - President Fidel Castro told two visiting congressmen during a ninehour meeting ending yesterday that Cuba had been aware of "rumors" of a planned attuck by Katangan rebels against Zaire from Angola and had persuaded President Agostinho Neto of Angolu to issue in-structions in February to try to prevent the raid.

The congressmen, Reps. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y. and Anthony Beilenson, D-Calif., returned here after the meeting and said at a news conference vesterday that Mr. Custro told them that the efforts to head off the attack failed in May because Angolan forces were unible to control the Katangans in the northern part of Angola and because Mr. Neto was ill in the Soviet Union and unable to exercise

Mr. Castro invited the congressmen to Havana to repeat to them his strong denials of President Carter's charges that Cuba was in-volved in training and equipping the Katangans.

The congressmen, members of the House International Relations Committee, were briefed last Thursday by Adm. Stansfield Turner, the CIA director, about the purported evidence substantiating To Offer U.S. the administration's accusations.

Cuba's African Response

conspired in last month's invasion of Zaire, Fidel Castro now says the charge were based on lies manufactured by presidential adviser Zhigniew Brzezinski. That is nasty — and unsupported. It is one thing to argue over the largely circumstantial — and plainly arguahle - evidence the administration furnished to back up its assertion that Cuba 1)trained, 2)equipped and 3)"did nothing." though witting to halt the Katangese forces. It is quite another for Mr. Castro to smear a particular official. He undercuts his denials and his eredibility - by fleeing from a discussion of the merits to ad hominem attacks.

In fact, what the quarrel with Cuba most demonstrates is the inadequacy of current procedures for dealing with Havana. Committed as Cuha is to the Angolan regime, one could not really have expected Mr. Castro to tell Washington of the pending Katangese incursion — even if, as he claims, he sought to get the Angolans to leash the Katangese. But Mr. Castro then waited almost a week after the invasion, while tensions grew, to assure Washington that Cubans were not involved and that he had tried to halt the invasion. Privately, the administration acknowledged those assurances without — for some reason - expressing any hint of skepticism. In public, however, the administration continued charging the Cubans with preparing the Katangese and doing nothing to head off the invasion. The resulting confusion was only compounded when the administration, in briefing congressmen, failed to convey Mr. Castro's statement that he had tried to stop the incursion. When that leaked, a challenge to the president's credibility was thrown into the hrew.

Merely to reconstruct this sequence is to

Not content to deny charges that Cuba indicate the need for close and continuous onspired in last month's invasion of Zaire, diplomatic contact with Cuba to keep misunderstandings from aggravating real differences. But the basic problem is not poor communication. It is Cuba's policy of using its forces, in league with the arms and advisers of the Soviet Union, to resolve one after another African dispute. If Mr. Castro wishes to demonstrate good faith in Africa, let him do so in two places where conflicts are currently raging: Eritrea and Rhodesia.

In Eritrea, such a demonstration is not entirely far-fetched. Long before Cuba began helping newly-revolutionary Ethiopia repel invaders from Somalia, Havana pronounced the Eritrean resistance an authentic Marxist-Leninist liberation movement. So it is that Cuba, and also the Soviet Union, are holding back from the full military commitment the Ethiopinns demand to crush what they call Eritrean "secessionists." The compromise that Cuba may favor for Ethiopia and Eritrea does not seem all that different from the negotiated federal solution now endorsed by the United States. Cuban and U.S. (and Soviet) diplomats might well quietly talk

In Rhodesia there exists a larger opportunity for Mr. Castro to demonstrate he is no adventurist. The prospect of heavy, direct Cuban support is what has inclined the Patriotic Front to stay in the battlefield. Mr. Castro should be steering the guerrillas into political compromise. His recriminations over the last incursion are no substitute for a clear-cut commitment to fair and peaceable change in conflicts still open. At Annapolis. Mr. Carter invited "all other powers" to join in that enterprise. What is Cuba's response?

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Watergate Window

It has now been six years since the burglars were discovered in Democratic Party headquarters, six years in which Congress has taken some serious reform steps concerning law enforcement abuse and ethical behavior by officials, including an admirably strong code of ethics for its own members. But some contrary signs are also becoming evident. Some the mini-skirt, yesterday's fashion; given the wave of taxpayer revolts, today's fashion seems to be not morality but frugality. "I'm afraid." a prominent Capitol Hill veteran said the other day, "that the window Watergate opened for reform is now closing."

Item: Concerned about the appearances of large amounts in outside earnings, Congress last year sensibly imposed a limit of $8,750 annually on its members. But now some representatives, who had been earning as much as $120,000 from outside activities, will carry to the floor their fight to rescind the limit.

Item: An important antidote to Watergatelike abuses is the proposed foreign intelligence surveillance act. It would eliminate warrantless wiretaps in national security investigations involving Americans. And it would blaze a trail for laws governing the activity of intelligence agencies. It won resounding approval in the Senate and, modified, has finally emerged from the House Intelligence Committee ready for action by the House. But now there are fears the House Judiciary Committee will wish to review the bill first. If it does, that would effectively kill the bill for this session.

Item: The Senate has approved a bill authorizing a temporary special prosecutor in cases involving the president or his senior appointees. In the House, the Judiciary Committee has reported a similar bill but it is now delayed by technicalities.

Item: The House has adopted a new resolution pressing South Korea to cooperate with the investigation of bribery among congressmen. But for weeks before that vote. there was plenty of muttering that "Koreagate" had been overblown. To get the resolution adopted took strong words from Leon Jaworski, counsel to the House investimembers are talking as if reform has become gators and former Watergate special prosecu-

> Item: As a recent Harris Survey indicated. the public remains suspicious of campaign contributions from both business and labor: two-thirds of those polled say these are a bad influence. Common Cause reports that the contributions of special-interest groups to candidates for Congress increased from $8.5 million to $22.6 million just between 1974 and 1976. Congress did enact a reform act in 1974, providing for public financing in presidential campaigns, but has refused so far to apply the same principle to itself. Four leading congressmen, of both parties, will make another effort to do so this week.

The problem and delays manifest in this catalog cannot be attributed to a belief that the heat's off and to a crude desire to revert to business as usual. In some cases, there are valid differences on the merits. There is among soroe members a backlash feeling.that Watergate produced a hasty reaction, one more of moralism than true morality. And there is a sour impression among some that no matter what Congress does to clear its skirts, the press and public continue to be skeptical.

The public does remain skeptical, perhaps harshly so. Congress deserves credit for a good start at reform. But it is still only a start. What happens to measures like those described here will tell whether Congress is truly determined to dispel the ghosts of June. 1972 and thus, finally, restore public trust.

Chile's Missing Persons

One of the worst aspects of the Chilean military regime is the many persons who have been carried off by the intelligence services since 1973 and have simply disappeared. No one knows exactly how many of them there are. Amnesty International estimates that there are more than 1,500. It is quite right that as much pressure as possible should he brought to bear on the Chilean government to account for them. The junta has been showing signs of sensitivity to pressure. There are, in fact, no indications that the military men have had a change of heart about how they think the country should be run - they simply are conducting a strategic retreat which will not go further than it has

'Newspeak' in Action

The basic tone of President Carter's Annapolis speech was unmistakably firm. The president denounced abuse by Moscow and Havana of the spirit of detente for imperialistic purposes. But Carter now has a problem. While the opinion polls tell him the country wants plainer speaking towards Moscow, as soon as he complies the roedia in New York and Washington take up the "cold war" cry already launched by Tass and Prayda. This is perverting the facts. When one superpower carries on naked aggression by proxy in Africa it is ridiculous to accuse the other of disturbing the peace when it draws attentioo to the fact. It is indeed, a prime example of George Qrwell's "newspeak."

At that time Lesotho's position and extreme poverty — a soil-eroded is-land of only 200.000 people sur-rounded by South Africa — raised doubts about whether the British should give it independence or not

By the light of an pil lamp in a rude, low grass-thatched house I supped with the paramount chief's two uncles and discussed the problems of Lesotho going it alone. Battleground

The Third World, no one needs to be told, is the new battleground, where besides solving their own multi-faceted disputes they stage and fight the proxy wars of East and West. Since 1945 nearly all the wars fought have been in the Third World. Around three-quarters of the current international arms trade is now with the Third World and is still on the increase. The number of aircraft missiles, armored vehicles and warships sup-plied to the Third World in the last half dozen years is equal to that sent in the previous 20.

Arms sales are increasing at 12 percent a year, far above the rate of economic growth of even the fastest- growing developing countries. Africa is increasing its purchases at 20 percent a year. Since the Third World patterns

A Glacial Slowness In China-U.S. Ties

By James Reston

States and the People's Republic of China move with glacial slowness, but recently there have been a couple of vague indications that the Carter administration is trying by indirect means to find a formula for normalizing diplomatic relations with Peking.

Even this statement was regarded by the official China experitying by indirect means to find a formula for normalizing diplomatic relations with Peking.

that the United States has been in- spite its recent symbolic move formed that France and Britain toward a compromise with Peking have been talking about selling modern arms and technology to the Communist regime in Peking and that the United States has raised no objections to such an arrangement.

It was also reported by Bernard that the United States has quietly agreed to a Chinese request for airborne geological survey equipment which is used in geological exploration of the ocean floor, but can also be adapted to antisubmarine war-

Change

This may have been what Zbig-niew Brzezinski. The assistant to the president for national security affairs, had in mind when he remarked after his return from Pe-king recently that he had reaf-firmed "our commitment to normalization, and perhaps to make a modest contribution of an indirect sort to it."

would make an important change. Meanwhile. Carter has also been responding somewhat more openly to questions from visitors here about the possibility of establishing a "trade mission" on Taiwan as one means of granting diplomatic rec-ognition to Peking and withdraw-ing it from Taiwan.

Keep Moving

His decision to send Brzezinski to China with authority to discuss a broad range of international questions, including the status of U.S.-Soviet strategic arms negotiations. is another real indication of Washington's desire to keep moving. however slowly, toward a settlement with the new regime in Peking, but this is a very delicate process, risking misunderstanding with either the Russians, the Chinese, or both.

For example, if officials here even talk symbolically of "progress" toward diplomatic recognition of Peking, the Chinese Communists resent this as an indication that they bave modified their policy toward Taiwan.

The official Peking policy on Taiwan was defined by Chairman Hua Kuo-feng at the 11th National Congress of China's Communist Party last August: cessions to change their Taiwan Province," he said, "is far without much success.

The Cold War Again?

By Norman Podhoretz

NEW YORK — Premier Leonid 1. Brezhnev recently eharged that certain circles in the West are trying to mar the process of detente" and 10 return "if not to the cold war, then at least to a chilly war."

In making this charge, of course, Brezhnev's purpose is to turn the tables on President Carter, whose warnings against Soviet-Cuban activity in Africa he says are designed to justify "the hloody intervention of NATO member states in Zaire." Nevertheless, it is undentiably true that the alarms sounded by Carter and other Western leaders over Soviet intentions in Africa and the world at large are rhetorically more redolent of the early '60s than of Nor is this a matter of rhetorie alone. As Cuba, Zaire (then the Congo), and Shaba (then Katanga) are on everyone's lips today, so they all stood at the center of international attention in the early '60s. The issue in Soviet-U.S.relations then was limiting nuclear testing, as the issue now is limiting nuclear arms. And when Vietnam began to drive everything else. including even the fear of nuclear weapons. into the background, the questions il raised were the same ones being asked of Zaire today: Was it a local or a global conflict? Was the present government any worse than the Communists? Could an alternative to both be found?

A change certainly seems to be taking place in the West, then. But it is no less certain that Brezhnev's description of this change is FBI was trying to hide as the terrorists of consciousness they are. couched in language that can only serve to mislead. Yet less than two years after subscribing to that principle, the Russians helped to foment a war in the Middle East which led to just such a confronta-tion, and they then embarked on a series of provocative military adventures in Africa.

What the Russians mean by "detente," in short, seems indistinguishable from what we mean by "cold war." It was the misconceived application of that effort 10 Vietnam which ultimately induced a U.S. shift from containment to the new policy of retrenehment and detente. Corporate moves like these entail a complicated series of financial decisions. Morgan can help you throughout the process. We can help you identify and weigh the capital, ownership, and tax implications of a transaction. We can help set criteria for potential partners or purchasers and, because of our extensive activity in the field, establish a list of candidates. We can advise you on the value of a deal, recommend how to finance it, and analyze the probable impact of the transaction on your future financial picture. If you get recommendations from marketing and technical consultants, we can help you fit their findings into your financial evaluation.

Morgan Financial Services is highly experienced in designing capitalization plans. Frequently, after an acquisition or divestiture, we are called in to assist in forming and implementing a financial program for the restructured company.

Your company does not need to be a banking client of Morgan to use our Financial Services group. Compensation is by fee, agreed upon in advance and determined by the nature and scope of the particular assignment.

Besides our headquarters in New York, Financial Services specialists are based at our offices in Paris, London, Frankfurt, São Paulo, and Tokyo, and work closely with our affiliates in Madrid, Amsterdam, Singapore, and Jakarta. An Elusive, Poetical Concept: Partridge

AS A NEW Englander, when I learned that the bird which I had trustingly called a partridge to the end of my adolescence was an imposter whose real name was the ruffed grouse. I should have suf-fered a disillusionment comparable to the traumatism which threatens children when they discover that there is no Santa Claus.

The misnaming of the ruffed grouse in the United States (even worse in the South, where this name is given to the quail) may be excused because even those who are in the know seem almost as confused about this bird as the O. Henry character who referred to Esau, that swapped his copyright for a partridge."

The word "partridge" seems to embody a poetical concept rather than a precise scientific definition. Noah Webster, doing the best he can, defines partridge as "any of various typically medium-sized stout-bodied Old World gallinaceous game birds of Perdix, Alecioris and related genera that bave variegated but not gaudily colored plumage, short wings and tail, and rather short legs and neck."

The Larousse gastronomic encyclopedia says that "partridge" is "a popular name which covers a large number of wild birds, all edible." Having thus informed us that while there are many partridges, the par-tridge does not exist, it goes on to tell us the partridge was "intro-duced into France by Rene, King of Naples, who brought several pairs from the island of Chios to raise them in Provence." This dubious satement was lifted word for American lifestyle will have influ-word from the Grand Dictionnaire de Cuisine of Alexandre Dumas.

Hunting Hints

Although Dumas said partridges were unknown in France before 1440, some are, in fact, native to France. There are directions for cooking them in Taillevent's
"Vivandier" and the anonymous
"Menagier de Paris," both written before King Rene was born. The latter throws in hints on how to bunt partridges with falcons and explains how to make a chicken look like a partridge, to preserve a host, in this heyday of game, from the ignominy of seeming to serve domestic fowl on a day when his falcons were sulking.

These gallinaceous game birds, North Africa and Asia. seems to have been the only species native to the British Isles and was the first bird to be called a partridge in English. Birds are mobile, however, even this one, so we may assume that it managed to flutter seross the English Channel early in its history (unless it was already there) to col-onize a continent where today it remains the partridge most frequent-ly encountered in Western Europe.

This may not last, for the gray partridge, an earth-hugging ground-nesting bird, though thoughtfully protected by nature in earlier times, is ill equipped to sur-vive in ours. Ground nesters, more or less tied to one place during the brooding season, are easy prey for sharp-nosed predators like foxes, who catch a whiff of bird odor and home in on it for dinner.

The gray partridge is so consti-tuted that she ceases to omit her customary giveaway smell during incubation. This foils foxes, but is little help against hunters, pesti-cides and mechanical mowing machines, to which the gray purtridge is more vulnerable than the second most numerous partridge of Western Europe, the red-legged partridge in English, the red par-tridge in French, a perching bird dix cinereal and the English par-tridge, naturally enough, since it and is consequently better fitted. for the time being at least, to hold its own against the perils of the modern world. This gets us into a new gentis, for the red partridge is Caccubes rufa (Alectoris rufa for those who faid to appreciate the onomatopoetic effort of Caccabis to imitate the cry of the young partridge). The red-legged partridge used to be particu-larly numerous in Spain and southern France (it seems not to have reached England, where it is sometimes called the French partridge, before the last quarter of the 18th century), but it is now overtaking the common partridge everywhere in France because it is being killed

Arguments about which par-tridge tastes the best usually revolve around the two commoness kinds, the gray and the red. In the 18th century the gray seemed to be favored, in the 19th the red. In this century I find one food writer stating authoritatively that the gray is better and another, equally qualified, asserting with the same firm-ness that it is the red. The only common denominator is that at different times and in different places the partridge perceived as superior tends to be the one which is more rare; snobbery has always accompanied the eating of game.

mechanisms to divide up markets and said governments should also "avoid trying to substitute their judgments about future growth sec-tors for those of the market."

The OECD secretariat has undertaken a major, but so far unpub-lished, study of such impediments to the free market. One official involved in the work said that some countries were found to be spend-ing as much as 1 percent of their gross national product to subsidize

No names have been mentioned publicly, but it is assumed that Britain and Japan, both of which have poured money into shipbuilding are prominent among them. The study also showed that suport for given regions often becomes synonymous with support for inefficient businesses.

In his opening statement OECD Secretary-General Emile van Lennep said. There seems to ben an increasing and highly disquieting tendency to suggest that action which effectively freezes patteros of trade and leads to a cartellization of production may become a widespread and permanent feature of our economies.

The foreign minister of West Germany, which with Japan is under intense pressure to do more to stimulate world recovery, also stressed adjustment policies.

"Regaining consistent and stable growth is not just a matter of coordinated domestic policies of expan-sion and stability," said Hans-Dietrich Genscher, "If this objective is to be achieved we must also ereate the external conditions of growth [including] the reliable functioning of a world economic system open to trade and invest-ment by making it safe from crisis." One of the main items of discussion at the two-day meeting is, in fact. The relationship between subsidies and macroeconomic policy. How much stimulation, for example, can be attempted w ing inflatinnary bottlenecks in lahor or commodities.

Monitoring Indebtedness in the Balance Sheet

Vigor of U.S. Companies Seen Eroding

develop, serious financial trouble looms

nancial vigor of most U.S. corporations keeps eroding according to various gauges that economists use to monitor balance

Indebtedness keeps climbing sharply but the wherewithal to pay off the debts is not keeping pace. One telltale barometer measuring corporate cash and other assets readily convertible into cash in terms of debts due within 12 months - shows that in the last decade the cash-to-debt level has dwindled from 72.5 to 30.7 percent. The rate for this year's first quarter, the worst since the end of World War II, is more than four points below the fourth-quarter level and nearly three points lower than at the pit of the severe 1973-75 recession.

There is widespread concern about the current situation and its possible ramifications. Has the balance-sheet barometer, at long last, reached a truly dangerous low point? No one can say, of course. But these facts appear undeniable:

 Relatively illiquid corporations are more apt to limit their eapital outlays. Any such restraint, in turn, acts to inhibit general economie growth.

Cash-short companies undertaking new projects are likelier to have to borrow the necessary money. In the process, interest rates tend to increase. That, too, serves to restrict economie growth. In addition, when a recession does larger if halance sheets are shaky.

The pattern would perhaps be less worrisome if other gauges of the corporate finan-cial picture were holding steady. But this is not the case. Data measuring the relation-ship between short-term and long-term debts due over periods exceeding 12 months show short-term debts, as a percentage of long-term debts, have been elimbing markedly.

In the first quarter of this year, the rate reached 33.9 percent, up from 30.8 percent as recently as 1976 and exceeds levels reached at any time in the postwar era, except the worst months of the 1973-75 recession. At the bottom of that slump, shortterm debts amounted to 34.5 percent of lang-term debts. The gauge did not move above the 30-percent mark until mid-1969. The latest rate compares, for instance, with only 23.6 percent in 1955 and 26.1 percent in 1965.

While the general picture indicates an ex-tensive erosion of financial strength, indi-vidual situations vary greatly. A breakdown of recent statistics shows, for example, that the eash-to-debt level in two industries publishing and instrument-making — stands at a relatively robust 50 percent. At the other extreme are such industries as tobacco (16 percent), nonferrous metals (17 percent) and industrial ehemicals (18 percent).

The eash-to-debt levels, it should also be

In some insunces where the cash-to-debt level has fallen, the decline reflects a sharp drop in cash holdings. In other cases, holdings of cash have held up but short-term debts have soared. Whatever the particular arithmetic involved, a common element in the general decline of eash-to-debt is the desire to expand activities in today's fast-

Edgar Fiedler, in charge of economic re-search at New York's Conference Board, ticks off other factors that may be contributing to the decline in cash-to-debt levels. Among them is a desire to operate with as little cash as possible at a time when interest rates are relatively bigh and rising, and a conviction that the cash-to-debt rates in earlier years were unnecessarily high.

How low can the eash level safely go? "It's impossible to say." he asserts. "So long as business keeps expanding with profits up substantially, there's nothing painful about the recent trend. Private enterprise solving public problems We design, build and operate systems which turn solid waste into energy. This results in a cleaner environment and a new energy source, ECO-FUEL® !!.

We've plowed our technological, financial and management expertise into fulfilling public needs in the private sector.

The result is solid, consistent, profitable growth, CEA solves

HE WORLD

In over 400 communities on five continents, AMI's 13,000 health care professionals are developing and delivering cost-effective health programs – our response to the new worldwide market for health care services.

Starting from the base of hospitals we own and manage, in the United States and internationally, we have developed systems and services to tap this vast new market.

Here are some of the things we're doing in that market now:

1. We operate two open heart surgery air lifts that transport patients each week from the Netherlands and Norway to AMI hospitals in London. There, they receive the lifegiving surgery for which they would have had to wait too long in their own country.

2. We are supervising the development and construction of the first major private hospital to be built in Cairo in the last twenty-five years, and will manage the hospital when it opens.

3. Working with government health care executives in Venezuela, AMI is implementing the first phase of a program designed to train 20,000 health care technologists over the next few years. This project will help create an infrastructure of skilled personnel essential to effective health care delivery.

4. Through our systems division, we are assisting hospitals around the world-such as the Hospital General de Las Fuerzas Armadas in Quito, Ecuador-to implement computerized financial information and control systems.

5. We are commissioning government hospitals in Kuwait and performing feasibility studies for a pediatric care center in Argentina.

6. Our pre-engineered modular hospital designs are being used to reduce drastically the time and cost of health care center construction in communities where new or expanded facilities are needed.

7. In the U.S., we are operating the first mobile CAT scanners as part of our shared diagnostic and therapy services. Such services enable hospitals to lower costs by sharing advanced medical technologies and equipment.

In addition to these projects, AMI provides specialized health care services, including the design, development and management of hospitals, out-patient and preventive care programs.

That's AMI's response to the worldwide need for health care: providing practical solutions to the real problems of health care delivery.

When the Money Comes in Waves

> Generating Growth by Grasping Timing in Global Markets

Money Hows in firld water from market to market around the world. When New York stocks are form-ing ries hundations, the investing public runs to G(HJ) and hard currencies which rally to provid-diversion. Then as New York rallies again, declines in preferous metals can trigger a general commodition market setback while short-term traders chase rising stock options.

The Capital Coins Research report, backed by intensive research into emerging growth industries and volatile lutures markets, is designed to show where new waves are forming and old ones breaking as the flow continues. Of the growth stocks Capital Cains kept recommending at New York's Libest loss, six at least doubled during the spring growth waves and now more candidates for such action are covered in a new report which also forecasts summer rebounds for COTTON, SOI BEANS and Chicago's volatile PORK BELLIES market—re-rentit busy correcting its sweeping advance of last rently busy correcting its sweeping advance of last winter. fires, though backed, still glow.
William Saroyan's "Chance
Meetings" has the words "A Memoir" on the jacket, but that is too formal a term for these loosely strung anecdotes, stories about people he has known and observa-tions on tife. He writes with deceptive casualness, spinning a subject like a top, then whisking it nway. Yet, there is an undertone of mel-ancholy in his observations on life as well as the optimism that is a leap of faith from the crambling ledge of despair. William Saroyan is still crazy about life after all these years, but be knows the Book

Speaking of the American city of Bitlis, whence came his forebears and where the people are either brilliant or oafs, he writes. "I seem. to represent a kind of combination of them, the wise man, and the fool, or at any rate the lunanc," meaning by lunatic what the Armenians call khent, a term of reverence and admiration.

Playing, a little bit, the fool then, Saroyan tells us stories about people like Sarkis Sumboulian of his boyhood Fresno, Calif., who painted mournful pictures of castles and clouds, had a nervous breakdown, went to London and maybe painted more pictures, or "maybe he only died." End of story. There are funny stories, such as the one about Saroyan's early job with a ceme-tery, whose somber-looking vice president hummed "Inka Dinka Doo" and concocted antic slogans, e.g., "Inter Here," which the boss always vetoed. Or the editor of The Macaroni News, who worked San Francisco's large population of spa-ghetti makers for ads, in return for laudatory stories about them, which Saroyan was supposed to

Both sides judged the bidding well on the hand shown. East-West bid to their lay-down six beart contract after South showed a weak hand with spade length and strength. North emerged from the bushes with a six-spade sacrifice. He trusted the opposition bidding, and knew that the penalty would be an acceptable one in view of the favorable vulnerability..

West led the diamond king and shifted to a trump, fearing that South would be able to maneuver a ruff in the dummy. With club length marked on his left, South drew trumps and led the club eight for a finesse. On the bidding there was a stong probability that West held the club nine, and the result was satisfactory.

East woo the ace, and forced South to ruff. West ducked the next club lead, but it did not help him. South ruffed a diamond and scored a club trick io his hand at the finish since West had nothing but clubs left. The penalty was 700. In the replay. North made a pre-

Twins' Manager Says Carew Won't Be Traded

TORONTO, June 14 (UPI) — Rod Carew will not be traded, you an bet money on that. Minnesota manager Gene Mauch said yester-

"If you want to become a rich man." Mauch said, "just go out and at Honey that Rod Carew ain't gonna be traded." Mauch says no club in baseball can afford to give what the Twins cant for their superstar. He says a trade for Carew will have to be a multi-player deal involving prime talent from the other club.

"On top of all that, how are they going to pay him?" Minnesota owner Calvin Griffith is reportedly trying to make a deal for four or five players. Carew, who can veto any trade offer, indicates he will only consider a move to one of five contending clubs - New York, Boston, Kansas City, California or Texas.

Carew, who currently is drawing $190,000 in the last year of a threeyear contract, said he and Griffith have been at an impasse since earlier this year when Griffith offered him a five-year, $2-million contract. Carew wants $4 million.

A dejected Carew said yesterday, "Nothing is done and there's no sense in my elaborating more than that. Whatever happens, happens—I can't do anything about it."

When asked if the Twins were trying to make deals involving players other than Carew. Mauch nodded and said, "Daily, hourly," hut would not say what players were involved.

NHL Panel Backs Proposal

North Stars, Barons Can Merge

posal today to merge the financial-ly troubled Cleveland Barons with the Minnesota North Stars. Representatives of the Barons and North Stars and various committees assigned to complete the proposal and present it to both organizations continued their discus-

The team would be based in Bloomington, Minn., home of the North Stars. The dispersal draft of excess players from the combined roster would be held under the following format: the top 10 skaters and two goaltenders would be protected from selection while the retected from selection while the remainder would be made available to the four weakest clubs in the league.

It was learned the governors had voted unanimously to shift Minnesota from the Smythe Division to the Adams Division which Cleve-land had shared with Buffalo. Bos-ton and Toronto. The Smythe Divi-sion, which Minnesota had shared with Vancouver, Colorado, Chicago and St. Louis, would drop to four clubs and the NHL complement would be reduced to 17

Yesterday, the panel acted on the financial plight of Roy Boe, his New York Islanders and the $19.5-million debt that has clouded his future as team president. The league's board of governors gave him until July 18th to present a plan of economic reorganization or face termination of the franchise.

"All' the league is concerned about is that we come back to them with our house in order financially and that we can show we have followed the board's guidelines." said Islanders general manager Bill Torrey, who acted as team spokesman. Putting the house in order means, as a bare minimum, that the cause of the importance of Arnold Palmer's 1960 U.S. Open victory to the lore of golf, it is often forgotten that Jack Nicklaus — then a 20-year-old amateur — finished just two shots behind in second place.

Nicklaus Seeks 4th Title On Rough Denver Course

Nicklaus, however, has not forgotten il. And as golf's all-time leading money winner made his tour of the Cherry Hills Country Cluh course yesterday in preparation for this year's Open, which starts tomor-row, his mind drifted hack to the final nine holes of his first big chance in a major professional championship. "There are courses that I've played yesterday that I can't tell you anything about," said Nick-laus, "But as I played the back nine today I could remember where I hit every shot that day, where the pin was, and I had firmly in my mind what I did wrong.

'Just a Kid'

"I was just a freewheeling kid of 20 years old and I played like it. I shot 39 on that last nine to lose.
"I had a 20-foot birdie putt on the 13th hole that day and ran it 14 inches by the hole. I had somebody else's hall mark in my line and I was so nervous I didn't have the presence of mind to fix it and I missed the putt. "I three-putted the next green. missed a three-footer at the 15th and a four-froter at the 16th, If I was in the same position today I might a shoot 39, but it would be fur different reasons, I know I wouldn't shoot a 39 if I had the ball in the same positions. "Had I played better and not let Arnold win, or let Arnold win on his nwn — however you want in phrase it - you wander what might

U.S. Open and going for bis fourth victory — something he has been trying for since he captured No. 3 at Pehhle Beach in 1972.

Nicklaus has gone without a ma-r title since he won the 1975 "I don't feel any more keyed up said Nicklans, "I just know it's been a while and I would like to win another one soon. He may win another one soon, but even if he does not, his record in major championships will likely remain unchallenged. He has won 16 of them — five Masters, three U.S. Opens, two British Opens, four PGAs and two U.S. Amaieurs. Nicklaus has finished second or ned for second 14 times in major tournaments and finished third or tied for third nine times. Shaping Up

"I've been doing a lot of things lately that I did to get my game in shape hefore the Masters," said Nicklaus, "I had a week of uninterrupted practice at home and I think that was the best thing for me. I was planning to come here a few weeks ago to play, but it was rain-ing and 40 degrees so I passed on Sports medicine authority says that with the boom in recreational sports in the United States, injuries, too, are on the increase.

2,000 MDs Meet at the Medical Olympics

By Jeffery Robinson

CANNES (IHT) — Nearly 2,000 doctors have come to town this week to compete for gold, silver and bronze medals in the world's first medical Olympic games.

Sponsored by the French medical daily newspaper Le Quotidien du Medecin, medical games are not what some people would cal games are not what some people would be speed to be at first glance think they are . . . speed ton-sillectomies or scalpel throwing. The games include 19 sports, and are based at least partially on the idea that members of the medical profession can best serve their patients by setting a healthy sporting example.

"Doctors have a reputation for being interested in sports," explains Liliane Laplaine-Montheard, editor of Le Quotidien and president-founder of the medical Olympic games. Until now, however, there haven't been international-level competitions exclusively for them. It took a year to set this up, but 34 nations are represented here and the quality of competition is unusually bigh for nonprofessional athletes.

In no way associated with the international Olympic Games, this Olympiad is nevertheless supported by the French Olympic Committee, in addition to the various French health and sports ministries. Eight American physicians are competing . . . most of them in track and field events, two in swimming, one in shooting, one in tennis

Mrs. Laplaine-Montheard points out that originally there were 21 areas of competition outlined, but her committee ran into problems with two of them. Field hockey was scheduled, but none of the 2,000 doctors signed up for it. Scrabble was also on the list but, says Mrs. Laplaine-Montheard, "we canceled it because we couldn't decide what language to play it in."

Surrounding the games is a symposium on sports medicine, and one of the speakers is a world authority on the subject. Dr. Allan

Editor of the magazine Physician and Sports Medicine and one of the first two doctors in the United States to have devoted himself full-time to sports medicine, he is a past president of the American College of Sports Medicine and a member of the American Medical Association's original committee on the medical aspects of sports.

"One of the major factors concerned in sports medicine is the prevention of sports-related injuries," he noted. "For instance, the medical profession's concern for high school and college football players has virtually eliminated heat-stroke deaths. The med-ical profession has been responsible for the redesigning of football cleats, therefore reducing knee and ankle injuries. Doctors bave managed to convince the governing bodies of high school and college ice hockey to make face masks obbgatory for all players, not only goalies. We've also made ourselves heard in rule changes, such as the outlawing of head butting in football blocking nnd tackling."

He says that with the enormous boom in recreational sports in the United States, injuries, too, are on the increase. "The better people get at sports, the more intense their injuries tend to be. The person who plays a simple, relaxed game of tennis isn't nearly as prone to injury as the person who plays a hard, vigorous game. In America today, the fastest growing sport is racket ball. I believe the average is something like 12 new racketball courts built every week. With that sport, eye injuries are way up. The medical profession is therefore stressing the use of specialty designed eye protectors, without glass, to prevent what is an otherwise high risk of gening hit in the eye with a racket ball." Sports, be adds, are, of course, an outstanding way to maintain general good health, and that's another reason for the medical profession's interest in promoting sports. "The best ones in that regard are running, swimming, cross-country skiing and cycling. All of these create a high rate of want from a sport. To stay healthy, you want to breathe a lot and hreathe very deeply. While some sports are quite enjoyable. such as golf, they aren't as vigorous as other sports. Golf doesn't get your heart heating fast enough. Anyway, nowadays, most golf-ers ride in carts, they don't even walk very

As for the question of drugs in sports, it seems that no sporting event is complete without doping tests. Witness the World Cup soccer matches, and even this series of medical Olympic games. The question was raised, would doctors use drugs to help their performances and how could doping be controlled. Mrs. Laplaine-Montbeard says. "We didn't know if doctors would object to being tested but we felt some testing should take place, so we've been spot checking. So far, no one has minded and there haven't been any problems."

But then. Dr. Ryan feels the whole question is very overblown. "There isn't as much doping in sports as there is concern for doping. I think the emphasis on the drug testing of athletes comes from Enrope, where certain countries are jealous that other coun-tries will have the slightest advantage. I feel it's overdone simply because there are no drugs that an athlete can take which will guarantee improved performance."

He says that while drugs might help kill pain for five minutes, they won't make an athlete run faster, play better or think sharp-"There's a great dichotomy here. Nothing is better for an athlete than good training, and the well-trained athlete doesn't need drugs. He's operating like a finely tuned Swiss watch. Anything introduced into his system will merely foul it up. It's the poorly trained athlete who thinks be needs extra help, when, in fact, all drugs do is throw him off his timing and impede his

Based on several years of work with athletes, many of those years as a member of the faculty at the University of Wisconsin, Dr. Ryan insists that a strong training program is the best medicine for any athlete, amateur or professional. "Good training puts you in shape so you feel better, and at the same time it tends to eliminate many of the causes of sports-related injuries. Athletes who stay in top shape don't usually get hurt. They don't even usually complain, except track athletes, I don't know why, but track athletes are the exceptions. They're all hypochondnacs."

Proposition 13 Hero PEOPLE: Too Tired to Face Court The proposition before a court in Oxnard, Calif., was: How to pursue the trial of Howard Jarvis, leader of the "Proposition 13" tax revolt in California, who is charged with drunken driving. Jarvis failed to appear for the trial. His attorney sold the court that he was ill, having stepped in a hole on a stage during a victory party after passage of Proposition 13 last week. The 75year-old Jarvis suffered a bemorrhage, the attorney said, and although he was not seriously ill. "He's just fatigued and very exhausted from his 95-hour work weeks." The trial, now postponed until July III, is on a charge lodged last March 15, when Jarvis was arrested. He pleaded not guilty last month, maintaining that his erratic driving was because of prescription drugs he had taken.

If Billy Carter can make it in show husiness, why not his wife, too? That's apparently the question Sybil Carter asked herself, and now she hopes to get in the limelight hy capitalizing on her local reputation, in Pluins, Gu., as a singer at weddings and church services. Mrs. Carter will team up in Nashville this week with the country music singer Tom T. Hall to record "Side Side" and "The Peanut Song." The record will be released com-

In Los Angeles, evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong has been temporari-ly released from responsibilities in his father's church empire and told to remain out of sight in Texas un-til the end of the year, it was reported. The Los Angeles Times quoted church sources as saying Herbert Armstrong. 85, accused his son of disobeying an order to take a leave of absence. The exile order came in a two-page letter to the younger Armstrong during the weekend. Armstrong, 48, a familiar radio and television personality. was ordered by his father not to contact anyone except his immediate family under threat of permanent banishment. The elder Armstrong is founder of the 65,000-member Worldwide Church of God, Ambassador College and Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, The organizations are financed largely by church members and have an annual budget of about $65 million. Armstrong was banished by his father in 1972, allegedly because of sexual
